Let Go, Dive In, Feel Up

Where: Georgetown College Cochenour Gallery – located in the Ensor Learning Resource Center on South Mulberry Street, Georgetown, KY

Date: January 20 – March 2, 2016

Description: For all animals play is an essential part of healthy physical, mental, and social development. Play is used to learn social roles and behavior according to the accepted cultural norms. However, living in a world where social norms and personal identity are in constant flux we are often confronted with situations that challenge our beliefs we learned as children. To exist in this new world of acceptance and equality we need to learn new roles or even reject categorization in general.

The Lake of Melchizedek

Where: Georgetown College Anne Wright Wilson Fine Arts Gallery

Date: January 20 – March 9, 2016

Description: "The Lake of Melchizedek" is a large kinetic art exhibit that has been over a year and a half in the making. Based out of the 14th chapter in the book of Genesis this installation confronts the notion of intervention and the current religious trend of solid state belief. The exhibition consists of 5 handmade 18ft rowboats suspended from the ceiling and a handmade writing desk and chair. Suspended in the air by ropes and pulleys the boats are balanced by buckets of water hovering above the floor. As the water in the buckets evaporates over the course of the exhibition the boats slowly make their way down into view.

Ms. Grimes is an award-winning newspaper journalist whose work has also appeared in national magazines such as People and Newsweek. She is a PhD candidate at the University of Kentucky where she studies early twentieth century African American communities. More specifically, Ms. Grimes researches a body of schools known as Rosenwald Schools, schools built both for and by southern blacks from 1912-1932. Her work centers on black activism in education or the work southern blacks did on their own behalf in regard to education in the Jim Crow South. She also studies interracial cooperation in education, and her work holds implications for understanding strategies to improve education for the least-served among us.
